Jha Condemns China At Sir George Seminar

by EVE COUPLAND
CUP Editor

"India is preparing herself for a long war, and a hard war. The Chinese invasion will not be tolerated." So stated His Excellency C.S. Jha, High Commissioner for India in Canada at the inaugural press conference of the Sir George Williams 4th Annual Seminar on International Affairs.

He was answering questions concerning the current India-China war. According to Mr. Jha, the war is "undeclared, but potentially very dangerous."

"The invasion came as a surprise to us, there were a few skirmishes, but we certainly did not expect such a massive attack," he continued.

Sinister Attempt

"The whole thing is very sinister. It is an attempt to browbeat and humiliate India... We cannot know the motivations of this absurd war between India and China. It is very difficult to get intelligence of what the Chinese are doing."

He went on to explain the difference between India and China, and why the Indians have been caught unprepared. "India is not a state which has organized herself for this warfare. Ever since her inception, she has been a peace-loving nation."

In the case of China, however, they have geared their whole economy for the fighting of this kind of war. India, as a non-aligned nation, has not paid sufficient attention to the possibility of war."

Concerning the validity of India's position in this war, Mr. Jha said:

"For centuries we have had that line, despite the fact that it was only shown on a map since 1914. The Chinese have now produced a new map, they have a tradition of producing peculiar maps... The question of the validity of the line was never brought up until 1948, but anyone can draw a map and claim territory."

Unprepared

Following these remarks, a member of the audience observed that the High Commissioner of Pakistan had stated that India was caught unprepared because two-thirds of the Indian troops were concentrated in Kashmir holding that city against Pakistani domination.

In reply to this Mr. Jha said: "This may not be statistically correct, but we did have many troops in Kashmir. It is possible that because of this we have been unable to guard our frontier as well as possible. But why have we had to put our troops there?"

Certainly, we are not responsible for this. It is because Pakistan is occupying Kashmir."

Union Stages Presidents' Banquet; Will Feature Lortie As Speaker

by PAUL BANNERMAN
University Reporter

Student leaders of the campus will gather tomorrow night in Redpath Hall at 6:30 pm for the annual Presidents' Banquet. Besides providing an opportunity for the presidents of various societies to become better acquainted with each other, the campus "wheels" will hear Dr. Léon Lortie, of the University of Montreal, speak on "Students, Student leaders, and Their Responsibilities".

The Union Board of Managers sponsors two such banquets each year, one in each school term. These banquets, in addition to providing an occasion on which the various presidents can meet and discuss common interests and problems, have two other main purposes.

First, the dinner is intended to make its guests, each of whom holds a position of importance in student life at McGill, more aware of the facilities and events that the Union offers for their benefit and for the benefit of their individual societies. The entire Managing Board of the Union will be present at the banquet to answer any questions that the Presidents may have concerning the Union and its use.

On the occasion of the Banquet tomorrow evening, Myron J. Galloway, Secretary-Treasurer of the Students' Society, will be formally introduced to the Campus Society Presidents. Mr. Galloway took over the duties of Wilfred Hastings, who resigned last year.

Guest Speaker

The guest speaker, Dr. Léon Lortie, who has recently been appointed Assistant to the Rector of the University of Montreal, has also served as head of the U. of M.'s Extension Department and as President of the Montreal Fine Arts Council. His topic of "Students, Student Leaders, and Their Responsibilities" is similar to the subject of an address which he gave at the recent NFCUS seminar held in Ottawa.

Attention All Sports Staffers

Will all sports staffers (Messrs. Lockwood, Raudsepp, Niilend, Gruber, MacFarlane, Riff, Stewart, Price, Haltetrecht, and Dufays and Miss Bauman) please meet at the office this afternoon at 1 pm.

This meeting is of magnum importance and all the above mentioned are strongly urged to attend.

by BONNIE STELL

With one day remaining in the Blood Drive, only 633 more pints of blood are needed to achieve the objective. The 616 pints collected yesterday brings the total to 2,867.

Members of the Blood Drive Committee have called for an all-out last day effort on the part of the student body. Each and every person who has not yet given blood is urged to do so on this final day.

The clinic will be open until 6 pm today, and an average of 80 pints per hour is necessary to reach the magic goal of 3,500 pints.

"Despite the almost complete collapse of certain faculties, particularly Engineering, Law and Divinity, there is a chance that our goal will be met. But only if students realize that this is their very last opportunity, and come out in full force," a spokesman for the Drive told the Daily last night.

Statistics

Statistics show that 40.2% of the total student body have bled. In the inter-faculty competition, Nursing is leading with 82.5%, trailed by P. & OT at 69.5% and Commerce 56.1%. Arts & Science is next with 50.0% followed by Engineering at 48.6%, Dentistry at 48.4%, Architecture at 44.1%, Divinity at 41.0%, Medicine at 30.2%, Education at 23.3%, Music at 22.7%, Law at 20.3%, and 188 graduate donors and others.

Concerning men's residences, Molson Hall heads the competition with 56 donors. Douglas Hall is next with 49, followed by McConnell Hall with 35, and Gardner Hall with 25.

McClennan Hall is leading the women's residences' competition, as it has achieved 100%. R.V.C. has 172 donors, and the Annex 12.

Phi Kappa Pi is leading the inter-fraternity competition with 93% having bled. Tau Epsilon Phi is next with 91%, followed by Delta Sigma Phi with 90%, Sigma Chi with 83%, Lambda Chi Alpha with 80%, Zeta Beta Tau with 79%, and Zeta Psi with 72%.

Alpha Omicron Pi is still leading the race in the inter-sorority competition with 91% of its members having contributed blood. Gamma Phi Beta is trailing closely with 85% and Kappa Alpha Theta is third with 78%.

Although the tally is not exact, Second Year is still leading the race for the "Clot", with 563 donors. 462 students in First Year have given blood, 342 in Third Year and 221 in Fourth Year.

Bloody Boris Taken Again; Napper Known

Bloody Boris, missing for over a year, was "kidnapped" again last night from Blood Drive headquarters at the Union. Mike Blau, Clinic Chairman, emphasized late last night that "the Bloody Boris business has gone far enough."

Boris is a bear's head awarded annually to the postgraduate faculty donating the most blood. "It was stolen before the Drive last year by four daring students with intentions only to return it at the end of this year's Drive," Blau explained, "and now it is gone again!"

Sleuths

Daily and Blood Drive sleuths went into action around 11 pm last night and after a brief period of questioning and tracing, discovered that Boris had been removed to the RVC Annex. It was obvious that a certain co-ed and friend whose names are being withheld by Blood Drive officials, had entered the Union Ballroom during the evening and disappeared with Boris, probably via the fire escape. The pair then decided to take the head to the Annex, where it is presently located in Room 3.

Blood Drive officials said early this morning that if the trophy is not returned by noon, the name of the kidnapper will be made public.

Recognition of Fraternities — A Plan

For more than fifty years men's fraternities have functioned on the McGill campus; thousands of students have been pledged and inducted at more than twenty different houses. Yet during all this time the Greeks have received no formal recognition by our Students' Executive Council or university authorities. Although in fact fraternities are very real organizations, in theory they do not even exist. Now, finally, a proposal has been drafted by the SEC which has received tentative approval from the fraternity presidents who will bring it to their respective houses; this proposal will allow for the official recognition of the Inter-Fraternity Council by the SEC. The provisions of this plan merit our consideration.

It is provided that no undergraduate fraternity shall exist at this university unless it is a member of the IFC, which will henceforth be the recognized representative of the houses on campus, and will receive "all rights and privileges accorded any society at present recognized." Whether it will also be subjected to all the duties and obligations of these societies seems unclear.

Perhaps the most significant provision in terms of a firm stand against closed-group parochialism and prejudice is the one prohibiting a member of the IFC from having "any discriminatory clauses pertaining to race or religion in its constitution." As evidence that such clauses are not present each house must present a written affidavit. It is doubtful whether more than three or four fraternities have such a constitutional limitation. These houses are given the opportunity to change their constitutions, or ask permission of the national secretariat, or if that is impossible to divorce themselves from the central organization by going local; finally, since no definite proof is required the members can perjure themselves under oath. Needless to say, since almost every house employs the veto system when admitting new brothers this provision may affect little improvement; if bigotry exists a mere constitution amendment is of little consequence, yet it is a start that has parallels in the southern United States.

It is further stipulated that although the IFC is to be responsible for the conduct of its member organizations to the SEC the latter body will not directly deal with the individual houses, but will exercise its authority only through the IFC. This is the present situation in regard to the advisory board of the university. Next follows a meaningless statement doubtless inserted to appease the fraternities. "The powers which the IFC shall possess shall be decided by the IFC Constitution." Superficially this appears to indicate that the IFC will not be bound by any outside agency, that its independence will remain intact; actually it must be interpreted as subservient to the other proposals and hence of no force if this amendment is passed; if the amendment was not passed this provision would be redundant.

If the IFC should "endeavour to render itself ineffectual through legislation" presumably in the opinion of the SEC, the latter may, at the request of the IFC executive enforce the existing constitution, until the two bodies agree. However notwithstanding any of these provisions the IFC may, by a ¾ vote, unilaterally withdraw from association with the Students' Society, and thereby revert to unofficial status.

Some may be tempted to ask of what use is this entire plan, if it has only a practical significance, and may be broken at any time. Perhaps it will have little discernible practical effect. More likely however it will create a heightened awareness on the part of our student government of its responsibilities for all campus organizations, of its duty to try to perform those which represent the university poorly, of its role as a leader in all phases of university extra-curricular activity. As well the fraternities may become more acutely aware and responsive to campus opinion, of their need to broaden horizons, particularly in the area of rushing policies. All this may seem far away; but at least it is a beginning.

Provincial Elections: An Analysis

One of the questions attending the forthcoming provincial election is the reason the government decided to go to the people with only 27 months of a four-year term having expired. The official Liberal explanation is that their two years in office have brought home to them the need for the nationalization of the private power companies, and that to undertake this gigantic task a new popular mandate is essential.

The leader of the Union Nationale Opposition, however, maintains that the government has called a general election because the province is on the verge of bankruptcy, which is somewhat of a non-sequitur, and at times during the campaign has denounced this move as undemocratic, thus revealing his fears of losing seats.

The third and perhaps most plausible explanation is that the issue of nationalization divided the Liberal cabinet and that the election was called both to heal an impending intraparty rift, if not to say split, and that the manoeuvre was calculated at the same time to gain a greater Liberal victory on an appealing nationalistic issue.

The Liberal party, it would seem, is not as free from factionalism as the Premier would have us believe. It is divided into a "reform" wing, led by René Lévesque and the old guard patronage-oriented faction. Electoral requirements facilitate the conciliation of rival factions in order to defeat the common enemy.

New Climate

It is clear that the Liberal victory of 1960 marked a turning point in the political history of the province: next month's election is being fought on new ground and hitherto heretical doctrines such as the necessity for some state planning to ensure economic expansion and prosperity are now being put forth, with varying degrees of fervour by both sides.

The Liberals have moved towards the acceptance of the welfare state as their politico-economic ideal, and the Union Nationale have seen fit to promulgate a moderately reformist manifesto, their first of any kind since 1936. Secondly, it is important to stress that public opinion has led the two parties to denounce the role of patronage in the electoral process, and, although in the case of the Union Nationale this denunciation may be motivated more by tactical considerations than by conviction, it nevertheless remains true that today in Quebec it has become a political liability to be accused "d'être patroneux." It seems that it would be impossible for Mr. Johnson to effect the "retour aux origines", for the center in Quebec politics has moved left.

Personal Popularity

It is interesting to note, as well, the great popularity during the campaign of both Mr. Lévesque and Jean-Jacques Bertrand, particularly among French university and intellectual circles. These are men of unquestioned integrity whose interests seem to be more than purely partisan in nature, and their activity seems to have struck a responsive chord in the hearts of the electorate, who may now be seeking to elect men who can solve the social, economic, and cultural problems besetting the province and not servers of more particularist party interests.

This election, I feel, should be seen as one belonging to a transitional period in Quebec politics, a period in which a new system of government and administration is emerging to cope with vast and hitherto much-neglected problems. But it is not safe to assume that the new order has been established and that the step made in 1960 was irreversible.

The voter must decide whether the new order first presented as a goal by the Liberals in 1960 is desirable and that, if so, that party which is best fitted to ensure that what has been accomplished already towards this end will be maintained and added to.

Avidar Will Speak To Hillel Audience On Israeli Problems

Avraham Avidar, Israeli diplomat currently visiting Montreal, will be the guest speaker at a special noon-hour forum at Hillel House today at 1 pm. His topic will be "Demographic Changes in Israel and its Problems."

Mr. Avidar was born in Poland and educated at the Universities of Danzig and London, and the Hebrew University. He held many official positions in Poland and Russia before going to Jerusalem.

As Deputy Director of the United States desk of the Israel Ministry of Foreign Affairs in Jerusalem, he has studied the educational and cultural problems of the integration of new immigrants into Israel. The public is invited to attend this forum.

Play "Cherry Orchard" Opens Next Thursday

Chekhov's "The Cherry Tree" presented by the English Department will open its three-day run on Thursday, November 15 in Moyse Hall. As usual, two for the price of one will be the policy followed for students on opening night. Tickets are on sale at the Union Box Office.

Chekhov's play, a tragi-comedy about social change and the predicament of those who cannot adapt to it, chronicles the last days of an estate belonging to a woman who longs to keep it. Unfortunately, her inability to act prevents her from doing anything to retain her childhood home. Her ineffectiveness and childishness provide comic overtones, but they also result in tragedy and death for those around her.

Ann Purdon, a veteran of productions including "The Lady's

Not for Burning" and "Man and Superman" will play Madame Renevsky, owner of the estate and the ill-fated cherry orchard. As well as her performances for McGill, Ann has also played in productions of the Paupers' summer theatre group.

Peasant's Son

James Bradford, Dr. Faustus of last year's Marlowe play, will be seen as Lopahin, the peasant's son who buys Madame Renevsky's estate. Bradford played the leading role in last year's Red and White Revue, as well as performing in "Adam" and "King Lear".

David Brown and David Wilson will play Gaev, Madame Renevsky's ineffectual brother and Trofimov, the idealistic student, respectively. Marilyn Sims and Marjory Barton, both of whom appeared in Brecht's "The Caucasian Chalk Circle" last spring, will play the daughters of Madame Renevsky, Anya and Varya.

Hugh Sproule of McGill's English Department will play an absent-minded neighbour, Semyonov-Pishtchik. He is welcomed back to the Moyse Hall stage after an absence of several years. Epiphodov, the unfortunate clerk who mismanages everything he undertakes, will be played by Anthony Northey.

Valet

Jesse Dickson will be seen as Yasha, the social-climbing valet and Bruce MacKay the wayfarer. Three newcomers to the McGill theatre, Nedra Johnson, Dierdre Beausang, and Dennis Mullen will play Charlotta the governess, Dunyasha the ambitious maid, and Firs the aged manservant.

"The Cherry Orchard" is being directed by Frank Faragoh, in charge of Dramatic productions for the English Department. Costumes have been designed by Helgi Ulk, staff geochemist in the Geology Dept. Jim Winder of the University's newly-formed Visual Aids Service is in charge of lighting, and Rod Ferguson is designing and building sets for the production.

Third Year Women Will Feast Tonight At Annual Dinner

The Women's Union in conjunction with the residents of RVC are sponsoring the annual Third Year Dinner tonight in the RVC dining room.

The dinner, usually held in March, will take place in the dining room used by the residents and not in the cafeteria as in past years. Dinner will be served promptly at 6:30 with coffee following at 7:30 in the RVC West drawing room.

Dean Is Guest

Guest of honour for the evening will be Miss Helen C. Reynolds, the new Dean of Women, and students will have an opportunity to meet her personally.

Each third year women attending the dinner will be assigned to an RVC resident who will act as her personal hostess. Students will thus have the opportunity to visit the rooms of the residents and learn something about dormitory life at McGill.

To complete the evening, the famous McGill Martlets will provide entertainment.

The W.A.A. will hold its semiannual open meeting this coming Monday at 1:15 pm in the RVC Common Room. At this time reports will be given by the Executive and by the Chairman of the Competitive Sports Council and the Recreational Activities Council. Awards will be presented to those sophomores who earned them last year as Freshmen. All women students are invited to this meeting. Anyone ambitious to work her way up in the W.A.A. hierarchy, or simply interested in seeing the W.A.A. in action would find this an interesting experience.

Figure Skating

The Figure Skating Club, under the leadership of Frances Rorke, has once again taken to the ice at the Winter Stadium. The main function of this group is to perform at the Winter Carnival Hockey Night. The chorus line for this event will be chosen from the girls who attend most of the scheduled practices and who show the most talent and interest. Beginners and advanced skaters are all welcome to join this group and coaching is available for those who desire it. The McGill club is planning to join the Canadian Figure Skating Association which is the parent body of Figure Skating; this would entitle members to take various tests at the end of the year so that they could be judged on a national standard. Another plan which might be carried out in the future — if there is a sufficient number of enthusiasts, a figure skating competition might be offered at McGill.

Intramural

Four Intramural Basketball matches were played on November 1. Kappa Kappa Gamma was victorious against AOPi and RVC defeated Physio with scores of 14-3 and 19-5 respectively. The Education team conquered their opponents Arts and Science by a close margin of 6-5, while RVC East squashed Physio 17-6. Becky Roe was the outstanding scorer copping eleven points, followed by Leslie Gault with six and Judy Ing with five.

On Wednesday, October 31, the semi-final and final intramural volleyball games were played. The Annex ended the semi-finals by walloping Commerce 15-6 and 15-5. In the finals, the Annex started off well by defeating Phys. Ed. 14-12. But the Phys. Ed. squad overcame them with scores of 14-11 and 16-8 to be proclaimed volleyball champions for this year.

This and That

The Ski House at Ste. Adele is now open. Reservations may be made at the RVC Phys. Ed. office... Leith Drury has been appointed Secretary of the Competitive Sports Council. Managers have been appointed as follows: Volleyball, Irene Wilkie; Ski House, Suzanne Stevens; Badminton, Marsha Stern; Hockey, Bea Taylor. The Presidents of Bowling and Fencing are Sandy Burt and Pat Stanford respectively.

Field In Awful Shape Need Break In Weather

McGill's Football Redmen have to hope for some breaks in the weather in order to come out with an even chance of containing the Western Mustangs and the Mustangs' powerful ground game next Saturday afternoon.

Last night, the field at Molson Stadium was in horrible shape. The turf, which was soft, was covered with a thin sheet of ice and about one and a half inches of granular snow.

When the Daily spoke to Harry Griffiths last night, he told us that he would have to wait to see what the weather was like today before he took any action.

Basing his comments on a government weather report, Griffiths said that today's climatic conditions were in all likelihood going to be mild. A drizzle is expected this evening.

Griffiths felt that the melting of the snow would prime the field for treatment with peat moss, thereby putting it in decent condition for the weekend tilt.

U. of Michigan Takes Competition At Western

McGill's Women's Swim team took part in a swim meet held at the University of Western Ontario last Friday. The one American entrant, the University of Michigan, seemed to put the Canadian groups to shame as the final score showed Michigan University with 89 points, followed by McGill with 31, Western with 30, and OAC with 6.

McGill swimmers who placed in the competition included Ingrid de Bainter, Chris Gyallay, Judy Longstaff, Jane Springer, Jane Wilson, Liz Barker, and Margo Wray.

Three special events took place, in addition to the speed meet. Pauline McCullough, a McGill graduate and present Canadian Synchronized Swimming Champion demonstrated her talents in a number called "Tryptic". Judy Mori of Michigan then showed the form which won for her the present title of U.S. Junior Champion Tower Diver.

Men's Event

Last but not least, Western's Men's Speed Team attempted successfully to lower the record set for the 200-yard Free Style Swim Relay. The new record is 1:36.4 as compared to 1:36.6 set in 1937.

In synchronized swimming, Ellen Purdie of McGill placed second and Ruth Gordon fourth. In the diving competition, McGill's Judy Irwin placed third and Ellen Purdie fourth.
